THE DAILY SENTINEL.

WM. E PELL, Editor.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 28 1865.

OUR TERMS.

THE SENTINEL is issued every morning (Sunday excepted) at the following rates:

For six months, - - - - -	$5.00
For one month - - - - -	1,00
" two months - - - - -	2 00

Our terms are invariably in advance. The scarcity of money however, obliges us to say to our friends that responsible and prompt persons who desire the Sentinel need not delay sending us their names at once, who can send us the Cash in a short time. The money may be sent us by the Rail Road Conductors or the Express Company.

Subscribers, etc.

A number of our friends owe us for subscription and advertising. We need the amount and will be obliged to our friends if they will send it to us by Express or by safe hands. The members of the Legislature will afford a good chance.

The Sentinel will be enlarged in a few days.

The Daily Sentinel.

Our advertising patronage and the demand for greater space in our columns for reading matter, oblige us to enlarge the Sentinel. We issue to day the first number of the enlarged size. It will give us nearly seven columns more of matter. This will increase the expense considerably, but we trust the flattering patronage which we have already received will be continued. Our daily circulation we judge to be equal, if not greater than any daily in the State, but we hope to merit a still larger circulation. The Sentinel has not in any sense come up to what we design to make it.

Owing to the poor mail facilities in the State, we cannot hope to commence our Weekly and Semi Weekly earlier than January next. In the meantime we expect to procure an entire suit of new material and presses, with a full supply of book and job type, in order to execute all work in the best style of the art.

We owe much to the enlightened liberality of our friends for the encouragement we have already received. In a few weeks we hope to be able to offer the public a paper, in all respects corresponding with the public wants.

Organization.

It will be seen that the organization of the House of Commons was completed without difficulty In the Senate, the election of Speaker was not effected. The election in the House having fallen upon Mr. Phillips, esteemed as a Western man, we find some of our Eastern friends rather tender at the idea of ignoring Mr Forebee, an Eastern man. There are several very strong reasons why we prefer Mr Forebee, but as every Senator is responsible to his own constituency and his own conscience for his votes, therefore we abstain from comment.

Hon. Wm. A. Graham.

The intelligence that Mr. Graham has not been pardoned by the President of the United States, after the certificate of his election to the State Senate by the unanimous vote of the people of Orange, had been forwarded through Gov. Holden to him, and that therefore he did not remain in his seat in the Senate on yesterday, will cause deep regret and sorrow throughout the State. A citizen long distinguished among us for his high qualities as a gentleman and statesman, and enjoying the confidence of almost our entire population, to be thus marked, can but occasion the deepest feeling This is particularly so, when it is the first instance of a similar kind known to have occurred in the South. Yet no one is disposed to attach blame to the President. It is well known that in these matters he must act under the lights which he has. These of course receive their complexion from the particular bias of those who give the President information. His policy has been in all cases, to grant pardon to those who have been elected by the people provided the Provisional Governor of the State endorses the certificate. What Gov. Holden has seen proper to do in this case, we cannot say, but it is a fair presumption to suppose, that Gov. Graham has not been pardoned, because his certificate was not endorsed or approved.

Was the last election a secession triumph?—It has been so charged and denied. But the tree is known by its fruits. We merely throw out this hint, that it is questionable whether the State will be officered by Union men or not—Let us await the result and see.—Standard.

There are persons in the State who were formerly secessionists. It is at least courteous to them to believe that they were honest in their sentiments. We believe they were, and many of them have proved the sincerity of their principles by their acts. The war however, killed the doctrine of secession. It can never again be resuscitated. All those who were formerly secessionists, have abandoned it as an impossibility, and by the oath they have taken, and by acts of good citizenship, they show themselves to be loyal and true men to the government. All are now for the Union. Hence there was no propriety in calling the late election a secession triumph. In the Legislature there is not a man who is not for the Union. We would not for a moment give our sanction to the election of a disloyal man to any office. If the Standard is justified in assailing men as secessionists who were formerly such, where is the wrong in opposing Gov. Holden as a secessionist? But leaving the magnanimous course of President Johnson in appointing Mr. Holden Provisional Governor, we judge men not by what they have been, but by what they are now. Former distinctions not worthy to be considered, where all sides of party, vie with each other in [illegible] the President and in their devo-

The Present Legislature.

Some days ago we ventured to throw out some suggestions and enquiries, in regard to the powers and character of the present Legislature. We have not seen or heard any answer to the interrogatories suggested, and no expression of opinion from any quarter. Yet in the future History of the State we apprehend, that those will not prove to be idle questions

We repeat, is the Legislature now convened, a provisional one or is it regular and constitutional? What is its true character and what are its powers? These we ask and to be derived from the Convention which authorized its election and assembling, in accordance with the wishes of the government at Washington. But the Convention itself was provisional, authorized not by the Constitution of the State but by the military power of the Federal government vested in the President. Nor does the sanction and election of the Convention according to the forms of the Constitution by the people, seem entirely to have impressed upon that body real organic or original powers, since the same military authority which called and authorized the Convention claims the right to revise its acts.

The Legislature therefore, is the creature of the provisional Convention, a body still in existence, and which can nullify its acts or destroy its functions at will. Moreover we apprehend, that the same authority which gave being to the Convention, claims the same right to revise the acts of the Legislature as in the case of the Convention, which would indicate that the government at Washington regards the Legislature as purely provisional. This view of the case however, appears to be contradicted by the known fact, that one of the most important acts which the government at Washington, claims at the hands of the Legislature as a sine qua non to the restoration of the State, is just such an act as can only be legitimately performed by a regular, constitutional Legislature of the State. We mean the act amending the Constitution of the United States in regard to slavery. It is understood forther, that the government at Washington expects the present Legislature to elect two Senators to the United States Senate. Neither of these acts could be valid if executed by a provisional Legislature. And if, under the stress of a provisional Convention and a provisional Legislature, acts are done which the body of the people do not sanction, what hinders at a future day, the attempt to disturb this action upon the plea, that they were only provisional and therefore temporary? It would seem therefore, in order to obviate all difficulties which may possibly arise, that the provisional government in the State should cease immediately upon the assembling of the Legislature. This would by no means involve the necessity for the removal of the troops until all grounds for apprehension on the part of the common government were entirely removed.

Furthermore, very serious apprehensions are felt that the National Congress may refuse admission to the Members elect from the Southern States to both Houses, because of objections which exist in the minds of the dominant party in that body. Will not or may not the difficulty be increased, by such representatives presenting to that body credentials coming from States held to be under provisional and not under the regular State government? Our condition under the ruling of the President's plan of reconstruction, cannot be similar to that of territorial governments, and yet our representatives are liable to the same disabilities coming from States under a provisional government, that the representatives of territories are.

These suggestions are simply thrown out to be pondered by those upon whom the responsibilities of legislation rest. If the present Legislature is a provisional one, then its duties may be circumscribed and the exigency may demand but little legislation. It will be hardly worth while to exhaust an already lean Treasury by a tedious and expensive system of legislation, which may be inoperative so long as the provisional government exists, unless we have assurance that it will speedily terminate. Whatever is necessary and essential either to secure the favor of the National government or to meet the present necessities of the people may be done, but the expenditure of time and money had better be avoided in doing what may be inoperative and useless for months or years to come.

Dr. Powell, Agent for North Carolina at Washington, arrived in the city on Saturday evening, and is stopping at the Yarborough House. We learn that he brought dispatches for Gov. Holden, but their nature has not transpired. Dr. Powell has rendered much assistance to our people at Washington, and we trust that his services will be recognized in some substantial way.—Progress.

We presume that Dr. Powell, as Agent of Gov Holden at Washington, is paid for his services. What is meant by the Progress, when it says, "and we trust that his services will be recognized in some substantial way," we do not precisely understand. It is alledged by parties who have visited Washington, that Dr. Powell's special friends there, urge very strongly upon the citizens of this State, the propriety of electing Dr. Powell, one of the Senators from this State. Of course they do this, when in a jocular mood. Certainly no one, much less the Dr. himself can seriously desire such a thing. The Dr has not been a citizen of North Carolina for twenty years Nor are we aware that under any circumstances, he would have any claim to so distinguished a position. But would it not be quite as proper for a citizen of Wisconsin to ask or desire such a position as Dr. Powell? But we shall not treat the matter seriously, as we might do Dr. Powell injustice, in intimating that he has been a party at all to the suggestion of his name for the U. S Senate from this State.

Mr. Worth's Vote.

A friend at Edenton informs us that at the comparing of the polls for the First Congressional District at that place, he ascertained that Mr. Worth's majority in that District was 2250. Jesse R. Stubbs, Esq., received a majority of 771 over Dr. Speed. Mr. Bond's vote in the District was only 450 votes

The sunshine of life is made up of very little beams, they are bright all the time.

The Constitutional Amendment.

We have published most of the following correspondence, but as the Standard gives it as a part of the important dispatches from Washington brought by Dr Powell, the Agent of Gov. Holden at Washington, we republish it that the reader may revive his recollection and that the members of the Legislature may have the Constitutional amendment before them before action upon it.

We advise the public not to go into fits at the serious character attempted to be given these dispatches brought by Dr Powell, by the Standard and others. After all, it will be found that the sun does not stand still upon the mount, nor will the power of gravitation be disturbed, when the full budget comes out.

The Legislature will act wisely and deliberately upon the amendment, and will adopt it no doubt with great unanimity. We have already shown that the serious objections offered to it by some are ill-founded. The thing will be done whether North Carolina favors it or not, and we cannot see the force of the objection to the second clause of the amendment. Our people are loyal. They have sworn to adhere to the Constitution and to sustain the government, and they mean what they say: and having acquiesced in the plan of reconstruction proposed by President Johnson, they will do whatever he considers essential towards effecting that object.

We learn that a dispatch received in this city on Sunday last, announced the sudden death of Jno. W. Syme Esq., in Petersburg, late editor of the Raleigh Register. Mr. Syme was a high minded, honorable man, and for some years has been in feeble health. He leaves an interesting family.

[Special dispatch to the Baltimore Sun]

WASHINGTON Nov. 23.—It is stated that Mr. Colfax will be on the ground here until Congress meets. He will thus have great advantage in manipulating members as they come, in advance, to his interest, as candidate for speaker, and as champion of severe measures against the South It is rumored here that Dr. Powell State agent of North Carolina has gone to that State with a view to prepare the way for the inauguration of Mr Worth as Governor. He is invariably spoken of here, by all North Carolinians, as an excellent man, and one identified with original secession.

Secretary Seward has received as yet no official reply to the remonstrances which he undoubtedly forwarded to the French Government against the sending of more foreign troops to Mexico But it is known that the French Minister in Washington has energetically protested against the appointment of Gen Logan as Minister to the Juarez Government.

It is stated that Judge Magrath, of South Carolina, and Hon James A. Seddon, of Va., have been released on parole.

Mr. Waugh, of Surry, nominated S. F. Phillips, of Orange, for Speaker, there being no opposition, Mr. Phillips was elected by acclamation. On taking his seat, the Speaker addressed the House as follows:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I thank you for the honor of being called to preside over your deliberations, at this anxious and critical period. I hope that I am not without some sense of the responsibility of this position. Such however, has been the good order preserved by legislative bodies in North Carolina, that within my observation the duties of this seat have never been painful—hardly ever unpleasant. I ask, gentlemen, that your favor, which has raised me to this place, may accompany me through the scenes that are before us. Conscious how highly I prize your good opinion, I shall not willingly do any thing to forfeit or to diminish it.

I should do injustice to my appreciation of the ability and patriotism which the people of North Carolina have gathered together in this House, did I abuse the present opportunity of addressing it by a lecture upon the gravity of the business which is before us, or upon the temper in which that business should be transacted. I indulge no doubt that what we have to do is to be done calmly, and with an eye single to the permanent interests of the State—so that whatever censures the lapse of years may instruct us to pass upon our own work here, we shall be consoled by reflecting that our errors were occasioned by the unavoidable infirmities of our nature. We will not purse within these precincts, hallowed by precious memories and sacred to freedom and to justice, either passion or prejudice. Neither ill-nature nor fear shall mark our legislation. Such exhibitions would only disparage us before the world, and we are sure that all trace of them would be erased from the public records by successors not far behind us I do not doubt that it will be your study to display even under our present untoward and distressing circumstances, the great virtue of magnanimity, and this, as has been said pertinently and with great force upon a recent occasion, requires that cheerfully and without reserve, we take things as they are!

Gentlemen, the eyes of the people of North Carolina are strained towards this Assembly, in the hope that it may accomplish something substantial towards the restoration of that law which has so long been silent They may exaggerate our ability to serve them in this respect. I am sure that they cannot overestimate our desire so to do Wherever throughout the State men and women say, Would God it were evening! or, would God it were morning! these are hearts which but keep time with our hearts in reckoning the heavy hours that divide us from that restoration and order and civil liberty for whose coming we pray. We long once more to see the benignant face of that great mother who cherished us in earlier and better days; we listen along the path where we sometimes flatter ourselves that we heard the fall of her footsteps.

To the eminent North Carolinian whose hands so happily direct the destinies of our country, we turn with pride and with confidence—tendering to him a hearty concurrence in that policy—wise and thorough—by which he has described the path to peace. For the re-establishment of our magnificent country in all her proportions of territory and of power—in all her amplitude of liberty, not a star obscured, nor a single stripe erased, we will do all that may become men.—who dares do more is none! Cherishing no aims, no hopes for our political future unconnected with the happiness and glory of the United States, we will calmly await the service of that great amender—time, in dispelling the cloud of misapprehension which in some degree is the natural sequel to the recent storm;—the effect of which however as commonly happens at such times, has been somewhat increased by mere party blindness and mere party malignity.

As true North Carolinians, we are not careful to answer insinuations whether made at home or abroad as to the candor and good faith of our present professions. Valeant quantum! But if God in his goodness shall determine that our cruel disappointments in the spring of 1861, the deaths and devastation of the succeeding war, and the heart-sickness incident to our present position are not enough,—let us ask of Him, hearts equal to all adversity, so that it may be said hereafter that the wisdom with which we yielded to changes required by the permanent interests of the country, and the wisdom with which we declined to yield to the caprice and pedantry of the hour, together with the fortitude with which we awaited the mature results of our policy, rendered us not unworthy fellow-citizens of the gallant gentlemen, who have displayed their devotion to North Carolina upon a hundred fields. If our contribution to the treasures of the State be not as brilliant as theirs at least let it be in character. The auspices attending us promise better things than those of 1861; under their influence, let us transport ourselves beyond this dark present to that, future in which peace and security and freedom shall bless, at least, our children.

Mr. Lyon, of Granville, nominated for Principal Clerk, Edward Cantwell of Granville.

Mr. Blackmer, of Rowan, nominated Beaton Gales, of Wake Mr. Gales was elected. Gales 72—Cantwell 24

For Assistant Clerk, Mr. Rayner nominated T. H. Hill, of Wake.

Mr. Henry nominated W. M. Hardy, of Buncombe. Mr. Hardy was elected. Hill 29—Hardy 73.

H. B. Kingsbury, of Forsythe, was elected Principal Doorkeeper, unanimously.

Mr. McKay, of Harnett, nominated John Hill, of Randolph, for Assistant Doorkeeper. J H Everett of Wayne, Bennett Barnes, of Wilson. Mr. Hill elected. Hill 77—Barnes 23.

Mr. Holderby introduced a resolution directing the Speaker to invite the clergy to open the sittings of the House with prayer, but without a vote on the resolution.

On motion of Mr. Waugh, the House adjourned until to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

RECONSTRUCTION.—Hon Henry W. Hilliard, of Alabama, has written a letter supporting the President's reconstruction plan, and intimating his willingness to assent to negro suffrage hereafter if the freedmen conduct themselves well.

SEVENTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.—The official vote for members of Congress in the Seventh district is as follows For A. H. Jones, 2886; R. S. Gaither, 2316; T. [illegible] [illegible]; [illegible] Lewis, 1416.

For the Sentinel.

United States Senators.

MR. EDITOR:—Our country has just emerged from the most terrible civil commotion of modern times. Many of the fairest portions of the "Sunny South" are still smoking from the dread ravages of fierce intestine war. The bitter antipathies engendered by the late sanguinary contest are not yet entirely extinct in the bosoms of our people. Under such circumstances our State Legislature now meets to legislate for us. Many great and grave responsibilities rest upon it. It must adopt such measures as are yet necessary to restore the State to her former relations with the Federal Union. First and foremost among these will be its adoption of the amendment to the Federal Constitution, abolishing slavery in the United States This duty, I doubt not it will early perform. The people of North Carolina are a loyal people. They are waiting to "go home." They are anxious to return again "to the old mansion." They expect their representatives to remove every obstacle which yet remains in the way. They regard the institution of slavery as practicaly extinct. No sensible man in the State ever expects to see it revived—few, or none of them desire that it should be.—Then there can be no difficulty on this point.

But another very important duty will remain to be discharged by it—I mean the election of United States Senators. This is a much more important matter than many are disposed to allow. It is, I conceive, the duty of the Legislature in making these elections to keep constantly in view one great object—the reconciliation of our people to one another and to the general government. No man should be elected, who from his antecedents would be objectionable to the national authorities. Yet some man should be elected in whom all parties in the State have confidence, and who would also be acceptable to the government. Have we such a man? We have, in the person of that great Statesman and incorruptible patriot, the Hon. WILLIAM A. GRAHAM.

Gov. Graham was noted for his life long devotion to the American Union. During the ever memorable agitation of 1860'61, he stood by the Union to the last. He plead its cause with all the zeal of his noble nature, and with all the fervor of his patriotic heart. He yielded at last only to circumstances over which he had no control—to the action of Tennessee and Virginia. When North Carolina was thus forced to take her stand with the seceded States, he went with his State. He nobly did what he conceived to be his duty to her. He gave all his sons to the cause of Southern Independence—He stood by the Confederacy as long as there remained a hope for it. Yet in his zeal for it he never for one moment lost his balance. He stood forth throughout the whole contest as the noblest champion of civil liberty against the encroachments of the military. His speech in the Convention against the test oath ordinance of Judge Biggs' should forever render him dear to the hearts of the Union men of North Carolina, whose honest sentiments he respected. His efforts in the Confederate Senate in opposition to the suspension of the privilege of the great writ of habeas corpus is scarcely less deserving of their gratitude. On the other hand, the sacrifices which he made to the Southern cause has secured for him the respect and confidence of the war men.

When he saw that the cause was lost, he bent all his energies to close the war by negotiation. He labored throughout the whole of the last session of the Confederate Congress to that end—He was mainly instrumental in getting up the peace mission to Fortress Monroe. Upon its return, he more than once visited Mr. Davis in person and urged him to send another and treat upon the best terms that could be obtained. If this patriotic advice had been followed, how much of property and how many thousands of valuable lives might have been saved to the South? But it was rejected. Yet he did not cease in his efforts for peace. He then desired the call of a State Convention for that purpose, but failed.

Such is the record of WILLIAM A. GRAHAM. He is, in a more eminent degree than any other man in North Carolina, a representative of both the late parties. He is among the purest of her patriots. He is the ablest of her living statesmen. His submission to the national government is final and without reserve. His devotion to the Union cannot be questioned. His election to the Senate of the United States would give more universal satisfaction to the people of North Carolina than that of any other man in the State. It would go further to reconcile our people to one another and to the Union than any other event that could happen. In the Senate of the United States we would all feel proud of him. He would stand there among the Senators—the peer of the proudest and the ablest among them—their equal in talent, in virtue and in statesmanship. In his person, as her representative, our good old State would be respected as she should be. Then will the Legislature fail to elect him? I cannot believe that it will, I am almost sure that it will not.

SPEECH OF EDW'D CONIGLAND, ESQ. of Halifax,

In the Convention, on the amendment of MR. MOORE of Wake, to the Ordinance declaring vacant the State Offices of those who had taken the oath of allegiance to the Confederate States.

(CONCLUDED.)

[The delegate from Wake followed Mr Conigland in reply. The latter rejoined as follows:]

Mr. President: I dislike at this stage of the session, to trespass again on the patience of the Convention, but I am impelled to do so by a sense of duty. Although my efforts may be fruitless of present effect, the records of this body will show that more than one among us raised their voice against what they conceived to be both unnecessary and unjust.

The delegate from Wake has occupied considerable time in exposing the inconsistency of my substitute, but the statement made by me should have disarmed criticism, and have silenced comment. I candidly admitted that I had offered it simply by way of compromise. I desired to save the judiciary, sacred in the estimation of our people, from the hands of violence, and to prevent a precedent which may hereafter be followed by the intriguing politician, to gratify malignity or to secure place. Besides, the incumbents of every office I propose to vacate, save the magistracy, have been removed by the provisional government, and I am not ambitious of a cheap species of martyrdom, by endeavoring to remedy what I cannot help. But the judges have been left untouched—the gentlemen appointed by the Governor being for the express purpose of aiding in the trial and suppression of crime within the limits prescribed by military authority. The inconsistency is, too, more apparent than real. The tenure of nearly every office which my substitute would vacate, is about to expire by limitation of time. Our United States Senators resigned. Our Constables would be out of office in February next; our members of the General Assembly, Sheriffs and Clerks of County and Superior Courts in August next; our Governor, Council of State, Treasurer, Comptroller and Secretary of State on the 1st of January, 1867. As to the magistracy, it is an office without emolument; it is not lucrative, and if the number, according to the delegate, be an acknowledged nuisance, it cannot be honorary. Adopting the words of Hoke vs Henderson, "To be deprived of such an office is often a relief, and never can be an injury."

This distinguished gentleman has not attempted to meet my argument as to the power of this Convention, acting in a legislative capacity, to violate the fundamental law, while it professes to leave that law untouched. He contents himself because he must content himself, with the dogmatical assertion of prerogative, and satisfies his conscience by simply resting on what he claims to be the physical power of the Convention. Nor does he seem to care whether, in exercising that power, he violates the inherent principles of justice. I am content to submit my argument on this point, with that of the delegate, to the arbitrament of all good and impartial men.

That the appointment to office "during good behavior," and the acceptance thereof, vests a right of property in the incumbent, and constitutes a contract between him and the State, which cannot be impaired without violating the Constitution of the United States, is virtually conceded. The authorities to which I have referred are impregnable even to the gentleman's assaults. A case, indeed, has been quoted which went up from Pennsylvania to the Supreme Court of the United States, and was there decided. The same case was referred to and commented on by the delegate from Bertie in his argument in support of the original ordinance introduced by him. Now every judicial decision must, of course, be construed solely with reference to the facts before the Court, and a bare statement of the facts of the case in question will be sufficient to prove its utter worthlessness, as an authority in point. It appears that the Legislature of Pennsylvania created the office of Canal Commissioner to exist for one year, affixed the per diem, and in February appointed Commissioners under the act. In April following the Legislature abolished the office, but the commissioners claimed the right of retaining the per diem for the whole year, on the ground that the tenure by which they held the office was a contract which the State had no power to impair. The Supreme Court of the United States sustained the power of the Legislature to abolish the office, and held that the right of the incumbents ceased therewith. Now this principle is clearly enunciated and sustained in Hoke vs. Henderson. No one has ever disputed the right of the power creating an office to abolish it, or has ever pretended that, when so abolished, the tenure of the office survived it. Every appointment to office for good behavior, is universally conceded to be upon the implied condition that should the office be legally abolished, the appointment is at an end. If the gentleman can produce only the authority cited, I am at liberty to conclude, knowing his great research, that none can be found sustaining the removal of the incumbent, without cause, while the office was still allowed to continue and exist. Besides the Supreme Court of the United States in deciding the question, whether a contract or not, must be governed by the laws of the State in which the case arises. Story's Com. §1378.

But that part of the gentleman's argument upon which he principally relies, and which he has elaborated with the ability universally conceded to him, may be thus annalyzed:

First. That the President of the United States, by virtue of his authority as commander-in-chief and conqueror, has, by his proclamation, removed all the civil officers of the State, and that he had the right so to do.

Secondly. Supposing that the said officers had been simply displaced by the government of the United States, and that, upon the suppression of the rebellion, "the constitution, laws and institutions of the State sprung back into existence as they were before the rebellion," the convention would still have the right to evict the judges, upon the ground that, by taking the oath to support the constitution of the Confederate States, they had broken the condition on which they had held office, to wit: good behaviour, and that the Supreme Court of the United States would so hold upon a quo warranto.

As to the first point, I concede that a "conqueror" may require the conquered to conform to the laws of the conquering State; may remodel their institutions and displace their officials, by substituting others of his own appointment. But this is all. According to the law of nations, as now established, he must respect their rights of person and of property; he must provide for the payment of their public debts, while he becomes entitled to their public property; he must admit them to the privileges of citizens, and can levy taxes only as of the future, and not of the past. (Wheaton ed., 1863, p 49, §83)—These principles are so well established, it is somewhat surprising that a lawyer of the gentleman's reputation should pursue a line of argument which ignores them. Now, the government of the United States must assign to us the character of a conquered people with the rights and privileges, as well as the burdens, pertaining to that character, or it must regard us as States in which it has succeeded in suppressing resistance to its authority. It cannot give us either character at will, and I for one protest against any such wanton exercise of power.

Without pretending to decide what, legally speaking, our status is, it is enough to know, that the United States disclaim "the title by conquest, and insist that we are in the Union, and have never been out of it." This Convention, as far as in its power lay, has accepted and confirmed this view of the Government, by solemnly declaring, that the ordinance of November 21st, 1789, ratifying the Constitution of the United States, is now, and from the day of its ratification has been in full force in North Carolina. The first point therefore falls, at once, to the ground. The President did not come as a conqueror, and none of the rights of a conqueror attach to him.

We cannot then be regarded as a foreign people, conquered by a foreign power, but only as a people who had been in rebellion. The United States in suppressing that rebellion, simply regained their Federal rights, and every man, woman and child not convicted of high treason, who are within the amnesty, are to all intents and purposes, American citizens at this moment, and entitled to all the privileges and rights incident to that character. This proposition being conceded, and upon the true principles of the constitution it is undeniable, the whole of the gentleman's argument on the second point is fully and effectually answered.

I, Mr. President, am not one of that bastard brood of politicians, and I know the delegate from Wake is not, who insist that the Constitution of the United States was not intended for a crisis like the present, but gives way to the higher functions of military power, and, lost to all sense of shame and public virtue, applaud and sustain every usurpation that may be resorted to under such pretense. The Constitution, sir, was intended for a state of war, as well as for a state of peace; its provisions are sufficient to cover every exigency that has arisen, or that may arise. We have a right to claim its protection, and to insist that we shall be governed by the laws made in pursuance thereof.

Although the points I have urged, in my opinion, effectually answer the second point made by the delegate from Wake, I will proceed further to examine it. Now the gentleman, in order to strengthen his case, like unto the adroit, but not over scrupulous advocate before a jury, endeavors to fasten on the judges an active participation in the "rebellion," whereas not forgetting the character of their high official position, they were almost entirely passive throughout the struggle; and judged by their acts, I speak not of their feelings, not half so guilty as many on this floor who are now clamorous to displace them. But admitting for the sake of argument, that they took the oath to support the Constitution of the Confederate States, I deny that, thereby, they were guilty of misbehavior in office either to the State of North Carolina or to the United States. If to the State, it must indeed have been against some shadowy authority in abeyance, or as the books say in nubibus. It may be added, that if the judges are to be removed for having taken said oath, "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind" requires that they shall not be replaced by persons equally guilty.

It is a well established principle of law, that all acts done in obedience to a de facto government, are not only excusable but justifiable, and do not effect the original status of the citizen when the legitimate authority is restored—"When, therefore," says Blackstone, vol. 4, p. 78; "A usurper is in possession, the subject is excused and justified, in obeying and giving him assistance, otherwise under a usurpation, no man could be safe, if the lawful prince had a right to hang him for obedience to the powers in being as the usurper would certainly do for disobedience." And see Wheaton, ed. 1863, 526: "No exception was ever taken by the most scrupulous loyalist to the acceptance by Sir Matthew Hale of a seat on Cromwell's bench of judges; nor did it operate as a disqualification for his holding the same position on the return of Charles II. No change, it is believed, has taken place in the judicial hierarchy of France, since the tumultuous days of the first revolution, in consequence of her repeated dynastic and other constitutional resolutions"—ibid. The authorities are all the same way and fully sustain my position, so that upon the authorities, and I cannot argue with a man, or to a court, that will set them at naught, the whole substratum of the gentleman's argument is swept away.

Suppose then that such a case as he has stated should go up, upon a quo warranto, to the Supreme Court of the United States, that Court would be bound to hold, having respect to authority, that no misbehaviour had been committed. But should it be disposed to hold the contrary, it would be compelled to give effect to the pardon of the President, which "not only discharges the punishment, but also the guilt of the offence itself, even so that the offender is in all legal respects, as free of crime as if the offense had never been done."

But how does the gentlemen meet this view? First by insisting that a pardon, although all-powerful, and removing the penalties of treason, does not restore to office.

Secondly, that there is no such penalty of treason as a loss of State office.

The delegate somewhat obscurely hints that the loss of office followed immediately upon taking the oath to support the Constitution of the Confederate States. But certainly he does not mean to risk his reputation by advancing a proposition which is not sustained by any authority ancient or modern. If loss of office followed upon taking said oath, then everything thereafter done civilly by our judges was void, and every criminal executed by their order fastened on them the guilt of murder, expressly contrary to the gentleman's own argument in his letter to his constituents. Were such a position true, then there is no necessity for an ordinance vacating offices already vacated by act and operation of law. The true principle is that the party, although guilty of misbehaviour, is still in office, and his acts are valid, until "office found" or until he is rejected by competent authority, upon proper proceedings had.

I will not therefore do the gentleman the injustice of fastening upon him a proposition obscurely advanced in his extremity. But I will take his own words from the preamble of his amendment namely, that by taking said oath the civil officers of the State "incurred only the penalty of forfeiture." And hence he proposes to inflict the penalty and to remove them by the act of this Convention. Now the Court would be obliged to see that before the removal, they had been cleansed from all stain and blemish, if any had ever attached to them, and therefore that they had been removed without cause, and would, of necessity, be compelled to declare the new appointees as in without right, and, consequently, usurpers. For the loss of office and the right to be restored thereto by mandamus would be the whole point in controversy.

But "the loss of State office is not a penalty of treason; the enquiry must be not whether they (the judges) were true to the United States, but whether they were untrue to the State of North Carolina." On conviction of treason and sentence, the party is to all intents and purposes civilly dead, and the loss of State office is, at least, one of the indirect consequences. But if such loss is not a penalty of treason, it is a penalty of misbehaviour in office whereof the party shall have been duly found guilty. Now we have no law in North Carolina, either fundamental or otherwise, by statute, or a decision of our Supreme Court, defining what misbehaviour in office is, and consequently the Supreme Court of the United States would be obliged to decide the question on general principles, and if so viewed, the party had not misbehaved, or having misbehaved, had been cleansed from the guilt thereof before removal, the conclusion must follow that, under the Constitution of the United States the removal was wrongful. Besides the whole argument of the gentleman rests on the foundation that the misbehaviour of the judges consists in having committed an act treasonable to the United States, and in a question arising solely on the allegiance of the citizen, if free of guilt to the United States, he must be so of necessity to the State of North Carolina. But the delegate feeling the force of the argument on general principles, and the force of that drawn from the effect of a pardon, would fain escape upon the ground that it is a question altogether between the State and her citizens. He pushes State sovereignty to the utmost extreme. Considering the facts of this case, his argument means, if it means anything, that a party acquitted of treason to the United States, may be found guilty thereof to the State of North Carolina. As for instance, that Jefferson Davis, if acquitted of treason by a United States Court, might be tried therefor, convicted and hung, by a court of the State of Mississippi. His argument that a judge cleansed from the guilt of treason to the United States, may be removed from office on the pretext that thereby he was also guilty towards the State of North Carolina, arrives exactly at the same conclusion. The truth is, that the distinction which the gentleman attempts to draw, is one of those farfetched subtleties and logical niceties with which his argument abounds, and of which it must be conceded, he has the entire monopoly.

As to the case of Judge Campbell and Judge Biggs I cannot insist that a pardon could restore them to office which they had resigned, but if they had not resigned, and still continued citizens of the United States, they could be removed from office only by impeachment, according to the true principles of the Constitution; and upon the trial of that impeachment, what should be regarded as misbehavior, and the effect of a pardon properly pleaded, I have already considered.

When, sir, I take into consideration the fact that Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina, have continued in civil office nearly all of the old incumbents, I must conclude that the attempt to fasten the responsibility of our proposed action on his Excellency the President, is but an effort to excuse the malignity of some men and the ambition of others.

Note.—Mr. Moore having added and elaborated, in his published speech, several points not referred to by him at all, or very obscurely referred to in the Convention, Mr. Conigland has availed himself of the same privilege in his rejoinder.

Reconstruction.

We observed on yesterday, that we had found in conversing with gentlemen who had visited Washington city, a very general disposition to express doubt and despondency at the prospect of early reconstruction. The untowardness of the times has led us to adopt as a matter of prudence, the motto of an old friend now dead: "Blessed is he who expects nothing, for he is never disappointed." Hence we have long since determined to take things as they come, and have therefore not labored to create any sanguine expectation of an early reconstruction.

It is however, with much pleasure we find the following encouraging views of the matter in the National Intelligencer, a paper whose intelligence, prudence and thorough acquaintance with national affairs, renders it perhaps the most reliable journal in the country. We sincerely trust its anticipations will be realized. The Intelligencer says:

"It is the opinion of Mr. Watterson and of others who have lately travelled extensively in the Southern States, and therefore had substantial opportunities to form an intelligent opinion of the disposition of the Southern people on the subject of their relations to the Federal Government, that every one of the States lately in rebellion will comply with the conditions required by the President as necessary for the complete recognition as loyal members of the Union.

"Florida has now, through the action of her State Convention, embraced all the terms of restoration which the President has declared to be necessary.

"In regard to the constitutional amendment for the inhibition of slavery, it has now been ratified by 26 States, in addition to which it will doubtless receive the ratification of New Jersey and Colorado, as soon as the latter shall become a State. It will, therefore, soon have the assent of 27 States out of 37. It may be stated with fair probabilities, that it will, in the course of the ensuing session, have been ratified by all the States except Delaware and Kentucky.

"With the death of slavery, all its legal incidents perish. The State laws will necessarily be so modified as to meet the changed condition of the blacks in all essential respects. As to the rebel debt, there cannot be much danger of its ultimate payment—even when it shall become due—to wit: "Six months after the establishment of Southern independence." Now, will this mode of wiping off the rebel war debt be unequal and unjust, in its financial bearing upon the States composing the late Confederacy? The actual loss of substance will fall, in a nearly equal degree, upon all the people and the different interests of those States, as was satisfactorily argued by Southern financiers and politicians during the war, when depreciation had nearly reached the point of annihilation.

"Therefore, it is plain that the time approaches when President Johnson will be justified, by his own view of the situation, in issuing a proclamation declaring that the States lately rebellious are entitled to representation in Congress.

Congress, it is certain, with its overpowering Republican majorities, will refuse to admit members from any of the States lately rebellious, without at least discriminating scrutiny, not only as to the loyalty of the individuals, but of the respective State authorities and acts. Other tests than those hitherto proposed by the President will probably be required.

As to negro suffrage, it does not appear that Congress will be supported by the Republican majorities of the Northern States in requiring that as a condition precedent to the restoration of a State. The late elections in Indiana, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Colorado all resulted, as that of Connecticut did, in the rejection of that plank of the radical Republican platform. Perhaps no Northern State will, at any time hereafter, adopt it.

On the whole, it is not improbable that, before the close of the coming session, we shall witness a complete restoration of the Union in all its political and financial integrity and power.

Ex-Governor Pease, one of the commissioners appointed by Governor Hamilton, of Texas, to investigate the condition of the State Treasury, reports that the amount of indebtedness contracted by that State during the war is about nine millions of dollars.

Pioneer Line of Steamers

FOR

Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston, via Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal.

THE COMMODIOUS STEAMERS PIONEER and Commodore Adams, will leave Newberne for Norfolk on TUESDAY of each week at 8 o'clock A M, connecting with the different lines of steamers for the above named points. On and after the first day of December next they will leave on Tuesday and Friday of each week, making semi-weekly trips. Shippers of Goods will receive every facility and accommodation for the transportation of the same, as arrangements have been made with the different companies to forward goods to this line at low rates and without delay. Each of these steamers are capable of carrying through the canal without difficulty, as they were built expressly for the trade. They are fitted up with STATE ROOMS and BERTHS capable of accommodating thirty-five passengers. Every attention will be paid to the comfort of passengers, who will not be subject to the inconvenience of transfer to other vessels, but will be taken through direct without charge.

The tables of the steamers are liberally supplied with the best the market affords. Families traveling will find it to their interest to take this line, as they will thereby escape the danger and discomfort of a sea route, and the fatigue of railroad travel.

On the 15th of December next, if the business of the line warrants it the steamer Williams will be put on the route, and tri-weekly trips will be made.

For freight or passage apply to Whitford, Dill & Co., Newbern, N C.

GREAT BARGAINS

IN CLOTHS AND FANCY DRY GOODS.

THE SUBSCRIBER RESPECTFULLY ANnounces to his friends and patrons, and to the Members of the Legislature, and to strangers visiting the City, that he continues to carry on the

at his old stand, where he will be happy to see them and sell them great bargains in his line. He would also call the attention of those of the Military Department wishing to purchase clothing, uniforms or citizens' dress, to the fact that they will find great bargains. In style and taste they cannot be surpassed by any in this city or any other. He deems it unnecessary to say any thing of his own skill in the Tailoring business, but it will suffice to say that his experience has not been for a few years only, but for the last 25 years. He therefore solicits a liberal patronage. Prompt attention will be given to persons wishing to have cutting done. Orders from a distance will be thankfully received and promptly attended to. Call at store No. 15 Fayetteville Street, Raleigh, N. C.

MRS. FENTRESS has opened a Boarding House next door, about 150 yards from the Capitol, where she will entertain members of the Legislature or transient Boarders.

Nov. 16-85-1m. T. R. FENTRESS, Merchant Tailor.

A CARD.

THE SUBSCRIBER WOULD RESPECTFULLY call attention of the Ladies and Gentlemen of the City, and the public generally, to a large and beautiful stock of goods comprising every thing that is needful to complete a wardrobe.

For cheapness there is none that can compete with the house of Messrs. Bowen & Randall, No. 15 Fayetteville Street, Raleigh, N. C. Call and examine his goods before you purchase elsewhere, and my word for it you will find cheap goods.

A new supply of goods has just been received and he will continue to receive them by every steamer that arrives.

The strictest attention will be paid by Mr. Bowen, the proprietor, and his clerks, to those who give him a call.

Make no mistake. Be certain to call at the store No. 15 Fayetteville Street, on the corner of the vacant square.
